Physical Appearance

Biography

As a child, Marie could never sit still. She always needed something to do, something to keep her attention. She was the oddball, always, and her silvery white hair never really helped her with that. As such, she was always a bit of a loner and person to sit to the side, although whoever struck up a conversation with her found her friendly enough. That was the whole cover story, at least. Behind that, Marie exhibited the peculiar phenomenon of being a Sage, people born with supernatural abilities, not unlike superpowers. This little-understood phenomenon earned her the literal watchful eye of research institutes, seeking to understand it, magic, and the difference between both.

Despite her ability and how it should negatively affect electronics, in the institutions she developed an interest in electrical machinery, learning a little from the researchers that were willing to teach a young girl. She found herself intuitively understanding these machines, perhaps due to the fact she could almost feel the electricity flow through the wires and how the logic gates switched on and off. This delving into engineering and science caused her to become a bit of a bookworm, reading textbook after textbook on the properties of electricity and magnetism, if only to see what the limit of her power was.

On the track of learning more, Marie stumbled upon Dahlia Morgan's recruitment posters. Seeing the promise of lost technologies, her drive that she developed to learn more drove her hand to apply before she could even convince herself it would be a bad idea.

Personality

Abilities/Skills

- Electricity and Ion Manipulation (Electrokinesis): Marie has the ability to generate and direct the flow of electrons, which allows her to adjust resistivity, current, and voltage through a given conductor as well as control magnetic fields. Manipulating ions allows her to use air as a conductor, and make various ranged attacks. This ability consumes a lot of energy, requiring

Marie to eat almost twice that much a normal person needs. This ability also tends to respond more to stress and anger, which causes electrical sparks to jump from her body at times. Her maximum output at the beginning is 0.02 amps and 5,000 volts, or 100 Watts, the base metabolic rate of the human body.

- Engineering: To take better advantage of her ability, Marie has studied extensively on the properties of electricity and electromagnetic fields. This has had the side effect of her learning principles of engineering and as a result she can perform repair on most technical things given time.
