Description

The Taverns floors are hard wood floors of cherry, the walls are equally made of cherry wood. The tables and chairs and chairs are made of polished walnut. To the immediate left of the entrance the stairs leading up to the inn are ensconced by booths. Looking more into the tavern upon the left hand side the common rooms fireplace remains lite. The large common's fireplace made of grey polished stone topped with a polished cherry wood mantle. As far back as ones eyes can travel within the common room upon the right side sets a booth behind which sits an old jukebox, and a pair of double doors. Beyond doors of ruby lacquered Rowan, craved with vines in a central relief with handles of black iron, lays Mithrandir's office. To the right of the entrance rests the grand piano. Upon the wall beyond the piano and more into the commons are the doors to the lavatories. If one has to answer the call of nature, the lavatories are spacious and darkly tiled the ladies with a hint of purple, the gents in a darker charcoal. Just before reaching the bar stools upon the right side sits the door of the managers office. The barstools setting before the counter, sit mounted upon the iron poles bolted to the floor. The cushions upon the stools are made of a blueish-green dyed leather. The bar counter itself is made of a deep blue marble polished to a mirror shine. Behind the bar sets a large mirror reflecting the whole of the common room only obscured multiple alcohol bottles. To either side of the large mirror are two etched glass doors that lead into a walk-in freezer. Upon the floor behind the bar are two holes in the floor boards rimmed with metal leading to the till.
